

Center for Research in Nutrition and Health Disparities
UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA

A Seminar Presented by:

Thomas Tobin

Law Student

Harvard Law School & Harvard Kennedy School

Food & Health: Food Law and Policy Perspectives

The Harvard Center for Health Law and Policy Innovation has launched several research projects at the intersection of food and health. In 2010, the Center developed a law school clinic focused on food law & policy. A clinical student from South Carolina will outline the Center's current projects regarding Food as Prevention and Food as Medicine. Particular emphasis will be given to the Center's projects relating to (a) policies to address diabetes and (b) the role of food banks as partners in community health promotion.

Friday, October 30, 2015

2:00 PM – 3:00 PM

Discovery I, Room 140

Tommy Tobin is a student at the Harvard Law School and Harvard Kennedy School, and he serves as a Teaching Fellow in the Harvard Economics Department. Tommy's publications have appeared in academic journals and newspapers, including the San Francisco Chronicle and The State. He served as the lead author on a recent Feeding America report entitled Food Banks as Partners in Health Promotion. A graduate of Stanford University, Tommy is originally from Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

This is a free seminar and all faculty, staff, students, and guests are welcome to attend.

Contact Mary Wilson or Ranina Outing at nutrinfo@mailbox.sc.edu or 803-777-6363 for more information <http://nutritioncenter.sph.sc.edu/>